The TCO regulation came into force more than two years ago. Soon after, the FRISCO (Fighting Terrorist Content Online) project was launched to support micro and small tech platforms in their content moderation and compliance efforts. Since then, the FRISCO Project has successfully provided support through information, tools, training, best practice materials, collaboration and research.

The FRISCO project will come to an end in 2024, but the fight against online terrorism remains a top priority at EU level, requiring a combination of legislative, non-legislative and voluntary measures. Significant progress has been made, but challenges remain to maximise the effectiveness of the TCO Regulation and related counter-measures.

To celebrate and ensure its continued success, the FRISCO project will hold its final two-day conference in Brussels on Thursday 17 and Friday 18 October. This event aims to open new streams of cooperation and practice by bringing together experts and practitioners from different fields (EU officials, policy makers, law enforcement, regulators, tech sector representatives, academics, researchers, NGOs, etc.) to discuss strategies to curb online terror. The focus will be on bridging gaps between policy, practice, law enforcement and research, as well as between the different components of P/CVE (Preventing and Countering Violent Extremism) at EU level.

OBJECTIVES

Present the results and products of the FRISCO project in a comprehensive manner, while ensuring their continued success and dissemination.

2

Bring together experts and practitioners to build partnerships and share experience, knowledge and best practice in a single forum.

3

Present the main successes and challenges related to the implementation of the TCO Regulation and, more generally, to compliance with EU digital regulation (e.g. DSA), based on the experience of key stakeholders.

4

Examine the online terror threat landscape, highlighting key trends and their link to offline events, thanks to insights from the European research community.

5

Assess the effectiveness of counter-measures and discuss practical solutions for countering harmful narratives, content distribution strategies and malicious use of new technologies.
